The Real Danger of Mormonism.

Senator Kenrus, of Utah, has raised concerning the Mormon. occurred to us and of which sooner or later this government inust take note. In the course of not or will not do this, lenders have sought to make the movement "a system of social offers, religion, a system of finance, a system of commerce and a system of politics." declared that President Joseph Smith lived in regal estate; that in the name of the church he was at the head of a great business monopoly. "He conducts railways, street car lines, power and light mpanies, coal mines, salt works, sugar factories, shoe factories, mercantile houses, drug stores, newspapers, magazines, theatres and almost every concelvable kind of business, and in all of theat inasmuch as he is the dominant factor, by virtue of his being the prophet of God, he asserts indisputable sway.

"It is considered an evidence of defer to him, and good standing in the h, for his hundreds of thousands of church, for his hundreds of thousands of followers to patronize exclusively the institutions which he controls. And this fact alone, without any business ability on his part, but with capable subordinate guidance for his enterprises, insures their success, and danger and possible ruin for every competitive enterprise."

Later on he added: "It will astound you to know that every dollar of United States money paid to any servant of the States money paid to any servant of United States money paid to any servant of the government who is a Mormon is lithed for the benefit of this monarch. Out of every $1,000 thus paid he calculate. his grandeur. This is also true of money paid out of the public treasury of the State of Ulah to Mormon officials. But what is worst of all, the monarch dips into the sucred public school fund and extracts from every Mormon toacher one-tenth of his or her earnings, and uses it for his unaccounted purposes."

According to this Joseph Smith is a po tor, and in the eyes of Mormons he is a man of greater authority than the Pres of the United States,

The separation of church and State is government shall not interfere with man's first allegiance is to his country into a relation with his church or any under oath or obligation to make his allegiance to the organization first and his consideration

There is abundant evidence to show that the members of the Mormon church are more loyal to its decrees than to the Constitution of the United States, and there is good reason to believe that they are taught from their childhood that their obligations to the church are more sacred and binding than their obligations to government, and that wherever there is conflict between the laws of the church and the laws of the land, they are in duty bound to obey the former in deobligations, if they exist, a strong taint of treason and sooner or later the government must reckon with it.

It is a hopeful sign to see so many men studying the Bible for themselves, and a most significant thing that this effort is necessary in Greer to learn the fruth seeing that prenching has been so universal in recent years. Compulsory Education.

Compulsory Education.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:
Sir.—A few days ago I read in your ever enterprising paper a masterly argument by Hon. Roswoll Page in havor of compulsory criteration, itso your editorial endorsement of the article. Education is an intensely practicable question, hense must be viewed from a business standpoint. What I knay say is not intended as a disapproval of Mr. Page's article, but simply the suggestion of some of the obstacles in its application or adoption. Let us try it in Carolino county. We have a colored gehool population of 4419 and intry-four colored schools. This would give us 180 pupils to each school of a detecher. Many of our schools now have an enrolment of seventy-five: this number is as great as we can possibly manage, and not at all satisfactory. Until the That means trouble for the Republicans. It means also that during Mr. Roosevelt's next administration there is going to be a lot of fun in Congress, which the Democrats at least will greatly enjoy. We suspect also that the President by himself will have his share of the fun. He bates 2 dull time anyway.

Dr. William Osier still insists that the telling work of the world has been done and is done by men under forty years of age, and that it would be for the general good if men at sixty were relieved from a cutive work.

'When reminded the other day by a repayere that Washington was forty-three years old at the outbreak of the Revolutionary War, Dr. Osler repuled that that was an exceptional case. Dr. Osler has recently been appointed regius professor of medicine at Oxford at a salary of $10,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is said that his consulting fees in that position will represent about $50,000 a year, and it is s

In my lumble opinion, that which will arouse the greatest interest of the people in our schools will do them, the schools most good. If compulsory education will do it, let us bays it and have it quickly. JNO. WASHINGTON.

This question is not clear whether the order was for one article scription, or whether a number of different substances (i. e., flour, lard, meat, have to accept or pay for any of the article, in the latter, however, it is the general custom of merchants, in filling an order, to send what they have and substitute another article for the one they have not on hand (which, of course, need not be accepted by purchaser, or clse not fill this item at all. Perhaps under a very strict construction, a man need not accept any part of an order unless all of it is filled, but certainly the custom of merchants is different.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—Will you please give the origin and application of the expression; "Between the devil and the deep sea?" I have hunted, but have been unable to trace it.

Respectfully,
S. T. WILLIAMS,
Attorney at Law,

Two origins are given. One is that the phrase means the same as "between Scylla and Charybdis," or between two lifficulties-in vulgar parlance, between 'the frying pan and the fire.' The second origin is traditional, and o the effect that St. Cuthman, on one occasion, in walking over the South Downs at Brighton, England, was mot by the devil in person. His sable majesty told the saint that instead of being put to the bun by convents and churches, ne intended that very night to swamp the downs with the sea. Cuthman betook himself to his sister's convent overlooking the sea and bade her-keep lights burning in the convent windows and masses repeated by the sisterhood from midnight to daybreak. When the devil came that night with pick axe and shovel to dig a dyke and let the sea in, he heard the sound of voices in holy singing and prayer, and his arm was paralyzed. Just then a cock, seeing the light streaming out, thought daybreak had come, and crowed lustily. The devil left his tools and fled, never to return. And so it was that St. Cuthman stool "between the devil and the deep blue seq."

It seems that when Thomas Whitaker died he left no will, and the heirs to the estate were so scattered that after some search the property was turned over to the British government, and has been in its possession for a score of years, pending the discovery of the missing heirs. Most of these have now been located, and the large fortune will be distributed among them. What share Mrs. Lee will receive is unknown, but is expected to be very large.
